

Quarantine for vaccinated travellers to Thailand reduced to 7 days

The past year, mandatory quarantine period in Thailand has been 14 days, sometimes up to 16 days and 15 nights.

Now the Thai government has reviewed the quarantine period and announced changes.

If you've been vaccinated against the coronavirus, the mandatory quarantine period will be reduced from 14 days to 7 days. The announcement was made by Thailand's Public Health Minister Anutin Charnvirankul in a press conference yesterday afternoon. Those who haven't been vaccinated, but have a medical certificate declaring that they are Covid-free, will be required to quarantine to 10 days, Anutin said, according to Reuters.

Minister Anutin says vaccinations must be administered within 3 months of travelling to Thailand. Travellers must still show negative Covid-19 test results issued within 72 hours of their departure to Thailand. Those travelling from Africa must still quarantine for 14 days "due to concerns about new variants of the coronavirus".

We'll update the details on this announcement as they come to hand.

SOURCE: Reuters